

Advice from state high court justices

Our friends at the Brennan Center's State Court Report have published a collection of advice for law students from eight sitting and former state supreme court justices. Read it here. The headliner is California Supreme Court Justice Goodwin Liu.

Perhaps the best is this pithy reflection by Arizona Supreme Court Justice Clint Bolick: "I would have advised myself to get better grades." Sage advice for those of us who weren't the smartest bears in the room back then, if only we knew.

Subscribe to the State Court Report newsletter here — it's a great resource for anyone interested in state constitutional developments.